Biography

My background is in Illustration and new media. I worked as a freelance illustrator for many clients including E4, Oxford University Press and Country Life. I initially lectured at the University of Brighton on the Sequential MA before joining Portsmouth in 1995 on the Illustration BA course. I am currently course leader for MA illustration (which I co-wrote in 2015) and supervise practice-based PhDs in the field of artists' books.

I have also worked on University research projects, incorporating new media from interactive educational material focussed on zines and artist's books. I completed my practice-based Ph.D at the University of Brighton in 2003. My Ph.D research focussed on the capacity of imagery within advertising to encapsulate the problems of visual representation in commercial illustration and design, e.g. the ways in which the states of mind are to be represented (delight, gratitude, despair and relaxation). you can read it here:

The safe cigarette PhD

I was invited by the Royal Academy to represent the genre of artist's books in their summer show. I have attended conferences internationally to speak about artist's books, zines and Damp Flat Books.
